

TIME OF REMEMBRANCE LEARNING ACTIVITIES

Studying the internment of Japanese Americans provides a thought-provoking experience for students. Teachers find that the classroom time spent on studying this topic is very worthwhile and makes a profound impact on their students. During the following unit, students will be reading a literature selection, Journey to Topaz. The basic unit is organized to complete in 10 days or sessions, with additional suggestions for extension projects. You may need to modify the unit to fit your allowed time and the academic needs of your students. If your school does not have a classroom set of Journey to Topaz, check out a copy from your school or local library and use as a teacher read-aloud. Reading the chapters aloud to your class also will shorten the time needed to complete the book. (Most bookstores offer a teacher discount.) The student packet supplements the suggested learning activities. If you elect to use the student packet, make a copy for each student.

Journey to Topaz tells the story of the hardships, both physical and emotional, that Yuki Sakane and other Japanese Americans endured because of the U.S. government's reaction to the war with Japan. By reading this book, students will gain a better understanding of the circumstances during World War II and the experiences of Japanese Americans living on the West Coast. The author, Toshiko Uchida, is a Nisei Japanese American, born in Alameda, California, in 1921. She graduated from the University of California, Berkeley in 1942 with a Bachelor of Arts degree. She missed her commencement by two weeks because of the order to evacuate, receiving her diploma rolled in a cardboard container at a horse stall at Tanforan. During internment, Uchida taught second grade. She draws upon her heritage and childhood experiences for most of her writings for adults and children, which include Japanese folktales, stories of Japanese children living in Japan and the United States, and historical fiction about Japanese American experiences.

日系人の経験

Day 1

Getting started with the topic

Objective: Students will become aware of the Japanese American experience during World War II. They will develop a sense of empathy by simulating situations that American children of Japanese ancestry faced on the West Coast.

Teacher's note: Prior to this lesson, provide no explanation of the purpose for the lesson. The two introductory lessons will be most effective if no background information is given. If students are curious, tell them that they will find out later. In Part I, students will write lists of things that we often take for granted that Japanese Americans were denied during internment. In Part II, students will respond to situations similar to those that Japanese Americans encountered during World War II.

Day 2

Part I of the lesson - Guide your students to respond in written form to the following questions, or assign as homework.

1. Make a list of your possessions, including items like toothbrushes, clothing, toys, etc.
2. Name the people you enjoy spending time with or people you see often, such as family members, relatives, classmates, friends, etc.
3. Describe your daily routine, the things you do regularly on a weekly or daily basis. (Include what, where, when, and with whom you do these things).
4. Describe your bedroom. How big is it? Do you share it with anyone? What is in it?
5. How far is it in feet/yards or number of steps from your bedroom to: a) the bathroom; b) the kitchen; c) the living room; d) the door you enter and leave your home?
6. Name some of your favorite foods.
7. What do you hear, see, and smell outside the front door of your house?
8. Describe your pet or a friend's pet. Write something interesting about the pet.

Part II of the lesson - Make enough copies of page 18 and cut the task cards apart so that each student receives one card with a scenario. Allow time for your students to prepare their responses. Each student will share his/her personal reaction with the class. These ideas might also serve as journal writing topics.

Day 3

Getting Started with Journey to Topaz

1. Using chart paper, write the word camp in large letters. Ask your students to brainstorm words related to the idea of going to a camp. Record their ideas on the chart paper and display in the classroom.
2. Read Chapter 1 aloud to your students. Discuss the chapter briefly. Suggested questions might be the following:
  - Who do they think will be the main character?
  - What date was the order issued?
  - From what country are Yuki's ancestors?
  - What pets does she own?
  - What are their names?
  - What is the upsetting news?
  - Why did the FBI take Yuki's father away?
  - How would you feel to be a prisoner in your own home?

Before continuing the book, briefly discuss world events prior to the United States entering World War II. Refer to the world events listed in Historical Overview and U.S. Historical Dates.

Reading Response Journals

As your students continue reading Journey to Topaz, have them keep a Reading Response Journal to record reactions, feelings, ideas, vocabulary, and questions. To create the journal, students can assemble lined and unlined paper with a simple 12" x 18" construction paper, folded in half and decorated with designs. You may want to provide questions or topics for your students' journal entries in order to stimulate their thinking. There are ideas for each section of chapters suggested in this resource guide.

Introduce Vocabulary Read Chapters 2 and 3

Introduce vocabulary words that your students will encounter while reading Journey to Topaz. Use one of your favorite activities or implement a new strategy. Try vocabulary concentration, vocabulary charades, vocabulary bee (similar to a spelling bee), or fictionary (a word game using correct and fictional definitions).

Create your own vocabulary list or use the suggested vocabulary words and terms included in your teacher packet. Some of the terms may not be found in student dictionaries. The student packet contains a crossword puzzle using fourteen key words.

Teacher's note: The presenters of "Time of Remembrance" frequently use the vocabulary words and terms included in the teacher packet. Your students will benefit from exposure to these words and terms before attending the program.

Just for fun: Mother served green tea and chocolate cake to the policemen and FBI man in Chapter 2. Serve some green tea to your class and ask them to describe the taste.

Journey to Topaz (Chapters 2 -3, pages 11 - 29)

After students have read pages 11 - 29, allow them time to write a journal response. Suggested reading response journal ideas:

1. Why do you think the United States government wanted to evacuate all the Japanese Americans from the West Coast?
2. Were you ever worried about something and didn't know what to do about it but wait, just like Yuki, Ken, and Mother had to do? Describe your experience.
3. Were you ever blamed for something when you were innocent? Tell about the situation.

Day 5

Learning Activity: Using a Primary Source Read Chapters 4 and 5

Give your students the following scenario: You are on your way home from school on a day in May 1942. You notice a sign posted on the telephone pole in your neighborhood. You stop and read it and want to tell your family about its message. Look over the posted sign, Civilian Exclusion Order No. 92, and find out the following to tell your family when you arrive home. (The Civilian Exclusion Order No. 92 is included in the teacher and student packet.)

- Who issued the order?
- What date was the order issued?
- What do you think this order means?
- Why do you think the order was issued?
- How do you think this order will be carried out?
- What do you think life was like in the U.S. when Civilian Exclusion Order No. 92 was issued?

Journey to Topaz (Chapters 4 - 5, pages 31 - 47)

Suggested reading response journal ideas:

1. Mother had so many memories in her boxes, such as photographs, diaries, and old letters. Mrs. Jamieson gave Yuki a special ring to remember her. Describe a special keepsake that you have, where you keep it, and why it is important to you.
2. If you had ten days to evacuate your home and could take only possessions that you could carry in two suitcases, what would you take and why? What would you do with the possessions that you had to leave behind?

Day 6

Journey to Topaz (Chapters 6 - 8, pages 49 - 74)

Suggested reading response journal ideas:

1. At first Yuki was excited at the thought of living in an “apartment.” Was there a time when things turned out differently than you expected? Tell about it.
2. Ken thought dreamily about a nice juicy steak, onions on the side, a baked potato with sour cream, and a huge piece of apple pie with ice cream. Draw a picture of your favorite meal, labeling your favorite foods. In your journal, describe your favorite foods and tell why this is your favorite meal.
3. How do the evacuated families try to make the best of a bad situation?

Day 7

Journey to Topaz (Chapters 9 - 11, pp. 75 - 102)

After reading this section, implement the following activity.

Euphemisms Objective: Students will learn the usage of the term “euphemism” and create their own “euphemisms” in relation to their everyday life.

Review with your students that in Chapter 11, “A Home in the Desert,” Yuki read the instruction sheet given to her family when they registered at Topaz. It stated that in Topaz, the people are to use the words “dining hall, not mess hall; Safety Council, not Internal Police: residents, not evacuees, and last but not least, mental climate, not morale.”

Explain that substituting a mild, vague, or positive expression for a word or phrase that has a harsh or offensive meaning is to use a euphemism. Ask your students why they think the Japanese Americans were told to use euphemisms.

Give the example of the word “homework.” Ask your students for ideas of a euphemism for homework. List examples. Have your class select the best euphemism for homework. Continue the activity by having your students work in pairs to generate euphemisms for school and home. Here are some suggested words to get your students started.

test	cafeteria	discipline
assignment	report card	chores
watching TV	exercising	washing dishes
studying	cleaning your bedroom
junk food	taking out the trash

Ask your students to think of additional words to find substitute terms that would sound more desirable and positive.

Just for fun: Start referring to homework by the term that your class voted as the best euphemism.

Day 8

Section V of Journey to Topaz (Chapters 12 - 14, pages 103 - 122)

After your students read this section, substitute the following activity for a journal entry.

Create a tanka or haiku. Explain the following to your students:

Yuki’s mother wrote 31-syllable poems, an ancient Japanese poetry form called tanka. These poems usually deal with nature and express an understanding of the world. The tanka is an unrhymed poem divided into five syllabic lines: five, seven, five, seven, and seven syllables. The first three lines make a complete statement on which the last two lines comment. The best tanka often flow seamlessly into one thought. As a poetry form, tanka is older than haiku and the most popular form of poetry in Japan.

Example: *The warmth of the sun
Brings life back to my garden
And lifts my spirit.
Another winter has passed
And life becomes more precious.*

Think of something you have experienced related to nature and tell about it in your own tanka poem. Illustrate your tanka.

Alternative activity: Students write a haiku poem consisting of three lines. The first line has five syllables, the second line has seven syllables, and the third line has five syllables. The author of the haiku tries to use descriptive language that paints a picture in the mind of the reader. Haiku is thought to be a derivative of tanka.

Map Skill Time - Where is Topaz? Locate the other internment camps.

Objective: Students will learn the location of the ten permanent internment (relocation) camps in the U.S. and gain an understanding of the climatic conditions that people endured while living in the camps.

Materials: Teacher reference map of the internment camps, page 23 in the teacher packet, and make a transparency of the student U.S. map in the student packet.

Procedure:

1. On the outline map of the United States in the student packet, have your students label each state. Two-letter abbreviations for each state may be easier.
2. Using the transparency, place a dot to show the location of Topaz. Have your students also place a dot and label by writing the word Topaz. Tell them some facts regarding Topaz, such as it opened on September 11, 1942, the population at its peak was 8,130, and the weather ranged from 106 degrees in the summer to 30 degrees below zero in the winter. Located at an elevation of 4,600 feet, the region was subjected to a constant wind that resulted in frequent dust storms.
3. Continue placing a dot for the location of each camp and labeling the name.
  - Heart Mountain Relocation Camp, Wyoming - The climate is severe with winters dipping to 30 degrees below zero. Elevation 4,600 ft. Population - 10,767.
  - Minidoka Relocation Camp, Idaho - Severe hot and cold temperatures, often plagued by dust storms.
  - Poston Relocation Camp, Arizona - Desert, perhaps the hottest of all camps
  - Gila River Relocation Camp, Arizona - Desert climate with summer temperatures reaching 125 degrees. Although not as bad as some other camps, dust storms were often a problem.

- Granada Relocation Camp (Amache), Colorado - Located on a hilltop 3,500 feet above sea level, this camp was arid and dusty, though not as severe as the Arizona camps.
- Rohwer, Arkansas - Located in wooded swampland with high heat and sudden rains.
- Jerome, Arkansas - Swampland, tropical with high humidity.
- Manzanar, California - (Inyo County) - Desert, extreme winter and summer temperatures. Views of Mt. Whitney and Mt. Williamson made Manzanar one of the most beautiful sites for an internment camp. Population - 8,828
- Tule Lake, California - Relatively mild climate; the land was a dry lake bed covered with sagebrush. Tule Lake Relocation Camp was designated as the “Segregation Center” reserved for Japanese Americans who answered negatively or refused to answer questions regarding their loyalty to the U.S.

4. Have your students shade in the area on their map that was cleared of Japanese Americans. (Refer to your teacher map.) Remind them that 120,000

Japanese American were interned during World War II. Ninety three thousand were from California. Over half of them (60,000) were children, and two-thirds of them (80,000) were Nisei (American citizens).

5. Questions to ask your students:

- During 1942-45, how many internment camps were used to imprison Japanese Americans?
- How many camps were in California?
- What types of climate did Japanese Americans face in these locations?
- Why do you think these locations were chosen?
- From what areas, or states, were Japanese Americans cleared?

Journey to Topaz
(Chapters 15 - 17, pages 123 - 149)

After your students read this section, substitute the following activity for a journal entry.

Culminating Learning Activity

Objective: Students will identify 3 rights ensured by the California Constitution and the U.S. Constitution that were violated during the internment of Japanese Americans.

Materials: Make a transparency of the RIGHTS supplement or “Constitution Wall” included in your teacher packet.

Teacher’s note: Constitution Wall is a monumental outdoor exhibit at the Golden State Museum, displaying 36 words from the 1879 California State Constitution. Your students will visit Constitution Wall during the Time of Remembrance Program for their culminating experience. At this time, simply tell your students that this is a word collage.

Procedure:

1. Display the transparency and ask your students, “What is the main theme or idea of this word collage?” (RIGHTS) “What smaller words are important?” “What words are unfamiliar?” (At this point a vocabulary lesson may be appropriate).
2. Have each student identify three words or phrases from the collage and write how those rights were violated for Japanese Americans in the book Journey to Topaz. Your class may also enjoy using their words in a “word art” project.

10 Questions
about Internment

(included in student packet)

Before your class attends the “Time of Remembrance” program, have them read the information in their packet, “10 Questions about Internment.” Students can read a few sections each day, and answer the question in their own words. An alternative might be to assign the questions as a “jigsaw,” having groups of students read and be responsible for the information in a section, then piece all the information together as a class for a presentation.

EXTENSIONS

Book Report Ideas

Have your students select a form of reporting Journey to Topaz. Suggestions may include: book jacket, letter to the author, literary critic, TV commercial to sell the book, filmstrip of significant events, board game, act out a scene, a 3-dimensional model, role playing game, etc.

Research Ideas

Reading Journey to Topaz may generate questions about related topics. Encourage your students to brainstorm a list of topics that they would like to learn more about and design a project. Students can work in pairs or groups, sharing their research findings with the rest of the class. Possible topics might be:

- World War II
- Japanese immigration to the U.S.
- U.S. Constitution
- Civil Rights Movement in the U.S.
- Japanese festivals and holidays
- Japanese dress
- Japanese dolls
- Japanese American contributions
- Picture brides
- Constellations in the night sky
- Desert life
- Weather patterns
- Bonsai

3-D Models

- Using a shoebox, make a diorama of a barrack apartment typical during internment.
- Build a model of an internment camp. Research the plans or layout of an internment camp. Students can make barracks from half-pint size whipping cream cartons or milk cartons from the school cafeteria. Use popsicle sticks, toothpicks and other materials to make fences and guard towers. Label the blocks and barracks with numbers.

Writing Projects

- Pretend that you are a girl or boy living in an internment camp during World War II. Write a letter to a friend telling about your experiences, challenges, and feelings.
- Write another chapter for Journey to Topaz, Chapter 18, to tell about Yuki's return home and "seeing the whole world through new eyes."
- Write a letter to President Roosevelt discussing reasons for releasing prisoners in the internment camps.

Class Newsletter

The internment camp newspaper provided a means for everyone to keep abreast of events and information. It also allowed people to express their views and readers to find out how others felt.

Most organizations have newsletters. Some are quite sophisticated and long, while others are simple but just as informative. Have your class create a newsletter that could be distributed throughout the school and to parents. Items to include might be units of study, book reviews, poems, current events at school, birthdays, class activities, field trips, class achievements, pictures, study tips, advice, etc. Create a title and assign tasks for production: writing, editing, layout, graphics, reproducing, distributing, and obtaining feedback. Make the newsletter a one-time project, or publish monthly, quarterly or biannually.
